There are many types of insurance policies that protect the company you've worked hard to build, including coverage for business property damage, legal liability and employee-related risks.

Business insurance can also help replace lost wages if your employees have a work-related injury or illness and need time to recover.

Importance of Business Insurance Coverage

In most states, your business needs certain coverages, like workers' compensation insurance (<https://www.thehartford.com/workers-compensation>) and unemployment insurance to operate. Workers' comp helps your employees if they suffer a work-related injury or illness by helping pay their medical expenses and missed wages while they recover.

Liability insurance (<https://www.thehartford.com/liability-insurance>) is also important because it helps pay the legal fees associated with lawsuits filed against you. Without these coverages protecting your business, you'll have to pay out of pocket for claims.

Choose the Best Business Insurance Options

General liability insurance (<https://www.thehartford.com/general-liability-insurance>) to help protect your business from liability claims, like:

Business income insurance (<https://www.thehartford.com/business-income-insurance>), also known as business interruption coverage, can help replace revenue if you can't open your business because of damage caused by things like fires, destructive winds or burglaries.

Depending on the unique needs of your company, you can also add other business coverages to customize your protection.
